

Look for the Big Sign, BUCHANANS CHEAP STORE

With many thanks to my numerous patrons for past favors, I now make my best bow, and would respectfully inform the public that I have now ready for inspection and sale, one of the largest and most complete stocks of STAPLE and FANCY DRY GOODS ever brought to this section of country. The GOODS are ALL FIRST-CLASS and RELIABLE, embracing all the new NOVELTIES in all lines. My house is full to overflowing with GRAND BARGAINS. I propose to be Headquarters for LOW PRICES and DURABLE GOODS. I don't advertise a few worthless, trashy article at Low Prices to gull the public. I think they have too much intelligence to be taken in by such transparent bait. I flatter myself that I am doing the largest business in Hickman, and I hope by doing honorably with my customers, to merit their patronage. Respectfully,

H. BUCHANAN.

THE HICKMAN COURIER.

The small minorities to which Congressmen Campbell of Ohio and Lawler of Illinois, were elected in this state, can attribute the result only to the fact that they had made themselves obnoxious to the Democratic party. Mr. Campbell's majority was three, and Mr. Lawler's one. In the two cases in which the majority in a Congressional district was but a single vote, the result was in which the two candidates voted the same way, or the other. A Governor of Rhode Island was elected by a single vote, and that in a Congressional district in which the majority either way is often but a few hundred.

The Kentucky Republicans charge general extravagance and incompetency against the Democratic management of the State affairs. These charges have received a quasi endorsement from a host of Democratic leaders who were making up the Democratic majority in Congress in order to get them out and then set in. Between the two, a large number of honest and good citizens and Democratic leaders gradually grow to the idea that there has been extravagance and incompetency, and that a new overture of policy should be made. An independent Democratic anti-slavery Blair-bill ticket would prove formidable next year.

The last Legislature amended an act passed in 1858 which now makes it a criminal offense for any dentist or those who make a business of repairing or pulling teeth (except regular physicians) to register as dentists. This was intended to prevent the registration of dentists who had not been educated in dental schools, and to keep the dental profession in the hands of those who had been educated in dental schools.

Gen. BUCKNER is the leading candidate for Governor, and so far as I can learn, he is to be a grand old man, well worth the honor; but the Kentucky Democracy will be on the defensive in the next campaign, and we should have a hard time of it. He is not willing to thoroughly and satisfactorily explain Kentucky's stand, and that man, however grand a hero he may be, cannot answer the false charges of corruption and extravagance that have been scattered broadcast over the State.

The Kentucky Democracy came out with the slogan "Ingleton only," losing the County, State, and districts, and carrying three others by a mere scratch. Next year we see Gen. B. Miller, and unless good-iteer is to be had, he will be capable of arousing every nook of the State, explaining to the people the fallacy of the charges of corruption and extravagance against the Democratic administration, the result of the State elections will be a thunderbolt of surprise to party leaders.

"Let's see the books," has come into a popular cry in State politics. The best test, and only proper answer to the popular demand is to show the books, confessing and dodging nothing. The people will then show the people that the Kentucky Democracy may have been guilty of "ungrateful slingshings," but not of extravagance or corruption. But, we want a live issue ticket to bring these facts out.

The Legislatures of Indiana and New Jersey will doubtless be the subjects of lively contests between the Democratic and Republican parties. The former is Democratic as now stand by slender majorities, but changes, and of frequent, changing electorates, and the manipulations of certain members furnish an opportunity for some lively wire-pulling, the outcome of which cannot be foretold.

It is proposed to arrange for a joint session of the legislatures of the principal cities of the Union States between Mr. Henry George and Mr. T. V. Powderly. George is the principal candidate of the Labor party for Governor, and is an open, absolute free-trader, whilst Powderly is the Grand Master of the Organization and is an out and out advocate of the labor movement, to be leading the working people out of the bondage to this tariff business.

Dr. W. GODFREY HUNTER died in New Haven, Conn., on Saturday, November 11, 1886, a permanent resident of that Territory. He seems to have the law, the facts, and the majority on his side, and the Free-trader Democratic had as well as up to the time of his death, pronounced Free Trade a good grace.

Kentucky Will Go Republican in 1887.

Probably very few Democrats who read this startling announcement will believe it, because Kentucky has been Democratic so long that they are apt to forget that the Democratic party has made mistakes.

But the news has been scattered broadcast in every county and district that may surely bring about that result for at least one general election.

It is true, however, in some

What can you do?"

This spoke rather short, thin man, with a full black beard, as he threw down the pen and gazed intently at the writer. A part of the subject of his writer's business, and at the same time became the object of his master's business, and kind of a hobby to him, he mentioned his visitor to a sister.

The speaker was Jay Gould, the called the representative of the Goulds, the millionaire banking firm in Mexico. Yesterday morning they started for St. Louis, leaving a man here of extensive business connections and railroad systems.

The bright eyes regarded the net-work of telegraph wires, "What is all this?" asked Mr. Gould, "we've got a good deal of ground, doesn't it? Perhaps I had better take up the subject again, and let you know that the most trained are accepted. In the way the promoters and leaders expect to be accepted."

Then there really is a marked difference for the better in the value of business, and not a mere fallacy, as many believe?"
